PH factory output still weak

By Peter J. Hoffmann

PHILIPPINE factory output was weak in October, according to a report from the Philippine Statistics Authority (PSA). The report shows that the manufacturing sector's output was 0.1% lower than in September, and 0.3% lower than in the same month last year. The PSA attributes the weak performance to a combination of factors, including a decline in demand for exports and a slowdown in domestic production. The report also notes that the construction sector's output was 0.2% higher than in September, and 0.1% higher than in the same month last year. The PSA expects that the manufacturing sector's output will remain weak in the coming months, but that the construction sector's output will continue to grow.

The PSA's report on October's factory output is part of a series of monthly reports that the agency releases. The reports provide a detailed look at the performance of various sectors of the Philippine economy, including manufacturing, construction, and services. The PSA's reports are widely cited by investors and analysts as a key indicator of the health of the Philippine economy. The agency's latest report shows that the Philippine economy is still facing challenges, but that it is also showing signs of resilience. The PSA expects that the Philippine economy will continue to grow, but at a slower pace than in the past.
